Editorial

I hope that now when we are under the gun of the Pandemic, we will open our eyes for alternative approaches in medicine. I hope we will be looking for anything that can help. I hope we will open our eyes to the possibilities to see and detect diseases in our aura long before they will manifest in the body with their physical symptoms. I spent almost 40 years of my life measuring the electromagnetic field, which we see as aura. I found that it is nonlinear electromagnetic field (NEMF), it is 1,000 times weaker than the EMF created by the nervous system, but this weak field rules and regulates everything in the body-not with its strength, but with the information it carries [1-3].

This weak informational field also rules our immune system, which makes it very important in the ongoing Pandemic. It is interesting how some scientists in their research bumped into this NEMF, but they went on without acknowledging its important role. We see the NEMF as aura. We can see and photograph the aura in high frequency electric field, which multiply the photons and make them visible to everybody (Kirlian scanner) or photograph the aura (Kirlian photography) [4]. However, even seeing the aura didn't raise our curiosity what it is and what is its role in the body. We are a dark material body and light Spirit, which we see as aura.

Dr. Haneman, the founder of the homeopathic medicine, published his book on homeopathy in 1798 [5]. The healing remedies were dissolved in water and many times shaken and dissolved again until not even one molecule of the substance was left, but they worked. In his advanced medical practice, he was asking his patients just to smell the remedy and this was enough to cure them. Dr. Haneman reached the conclusion that the diseases we have are not malfunctioning of the material body-they come from the Spirit. He also understood that the remedies have invisible, not sensed, and immeasurable part, which can be distantly sensed. I was able to measure this field, but I had to develop equipment that was 1,000 times more sensitive than the equipment used to measure the body bio currents.

Hundred years after Dr. Haneman, the German medical doctor Reinhold Vol developed equipment for measuring the electrical characteristics of the acupuncture points. He noticed when measuring the electrical characteristics of an acupuncture point that the reading changed when his patient accidentally touched a bottle with medication inside [6]. The medication was influencing the patient through the glass bottle. This should tell the doctor right away that the medication has EMF, and if it passes through the glass bottle, it must be nonlinear EMF, i.e. NEMF. But this is something that the physicists dealing with nonlinear physics know, not the medical doctors.

Dr. Reinhard Vol did many experiments investigating the informational effect of the medications [6]. He showed that electromagnetic field is involved. When the emission of the medication is directed toward the patient, the patient absorbs the emission and changes correspondingly. Dr. Reinhard Vol also discovered that the system of acupuncture points and meridians is the same field system (NEMF), which rules and regulates the organs' functioning and everything else in the body. In 1983, I predicted based on mathematical model that waves must run from each treated acupuncture point in the direction of the meridian, and such waves were detected a year later [7-9]. These are the waves of the NEMF, seen as aura and called Spirit.

Kim Bong Han in North Korea found that the system of acupuncture points and meridians is formed in the embryo before the organs have developed. This makes it obvious that the acupuncture system, with operates with the waves of our NEMF (Spirit) provides the information how the organs and tissue specific formations should develop. Thus, the Spirit (NEMF) rules the formation of the organs and later regulates their functioning. Proof of this is the fact that the first organ that develops in an embryo is the heart. And since the heart is the unity of body and Spirit, obviously the heart in an embryo is developed under the guidance of the information from the weak informational NEMF called Spirit [10]. The brain is developed much later.

Benveniste, a French immunologist, was studding after year 2000 the influence of histamine on blood cells [11]. He found with surprise that after the histamine has been filtered out, his blood cells were still responding to something in the water. He found that this something was disappearing after heating or after applying magnetic field, and this was not the case if the histamine was dissolved there. He also found that the histamine was able to have impact on the solution and his blood cells without being dissolved in the water, by just being placed nearby. Benveniste reached the far going conclusion that the influence is informational and if so, it should be possible to be recorded on computer disks.

Dr. Gerbert in his book: “Vibrational Medicine” published in 1998 also stated that the diseases can be registered in the field (NEMF) before they manifest themselves in the physical body [12]. British medical doctor found a way to see auras by looking through cyanide filter and soon he realized that he could diagnose his patients by looking at their auras. He was even able to see oncoming diseases in the aura before they have manifested themselves in the physical body with symptoms [6]. This means that we can reliably detect the Coronavirus contamination at very early stage by looking at the aura and take preventive measures. The Pandemic is here to open our eyes for the important role our NEMF (seen as aura and called Spirit) plays in our life and wellbeing. We are dark material body and light NEMF seen as aura and called Spirit.
